

Conor Casey and Evangeline Urcia on We Do the Work: Filipino American activist, poet, writer, and worker Carlos Bulosan

Posted on June 2, 2017 by Conor Casey

The latest episode of the Labor Archives of Washington's regular segment on the KSVR radio show We Do the Work is now streaming online via KSVR and Public Radio International's Exchange.

This interview is with Conor Casey, Labor Archivist at the Labor Archives of Washington, and Evangeline Urcia, great-grandniece of Filipino American activist, poet, writer, and worker Carlos Bulosan.

The regular segment, called "Learn Yourself", features Labor Archivist Conor Casey (Labor Archives of Washington, University of Washington Libraries Special Collections) being interviewed about a history topic by host Mike Dumovich with an emphasis on archival collections and secondary sources related to the topic in the hopes that it will inspire people to learn more about labor history on their own.

Links to Other Episodes in the Series:

- Labor Archives of Washington Overview
- Everett Massacre, also called Bloody Sunday, where a confrontation caused 7 to 12 people to be murdered on November 5, 1916.
- Filipino American Cannery Workers' Unionism and the Murder of Domingo and Viernes
- Farmworkers' History: The Chateau St. Michelle Grape Boycott and the Labor Archives of Washington's second annual event Preserving Solidarity Forever: Washington State Farmworkers' Struggles.
- Images of Labor and Social Justice: The Life and Art of Richard V. Correll
- Author, Poet, Worker: Carlos Bulosan's Collections at the Labor Archives of Washington and the Quest to Uncover and Preserve Bulosan Family History

Author

- Conor Casey